

Nabtesco Receives “2016 Supplier of the Year” from Boeing

Nabtesco Corporation (headquarters: Chiyoda-ku, Tokyo; President & CEO: Katsuhiko Teramoto) has been recognized as 2016 Supplier of the Year in the environment category by The Boeing Company (headquarters: Chicago, Illinois; Chairman, President and Chief Executive Officer: Dennis A. Muilenburg). We are honored to receive the Supplier of the Year award for the third time in four years, followed by 2013 and 2015.

Nabtesco has built a great partnership with Boeing over the years since 1976, supporting Flight Control Actuation Systems and Hydraulic Equipment for the Boeing 737, 747, 767, 777, 737MAX, and the latest 777X.

In addition to our past contribution to Boeing business, which is based on economic rationality, we recognize that our ongoing environmental and social activities, aiming to achieve CO₂ reduction and zero-emission of hazardous chemical substances through our overall business operations, are also in alignment with our valued customer, Boeing.

It is a great honor for us to receive the supplier of the year award. We, Nabtesco as a global company, will continue to work diligently to live up to this honor and further contribute to safe, reliable, and comfortable air travel for our worldwide customers based on our solid business vision in anticipation of the future society.
